Detective Russell is a graduate of our Reserve Academy in 2007 and a graduate of the CWU Law and Justice Program in 2008. Here's what Detective Russell says about his experience as a booking and how he prepared for full-time public service: 'I first became interested in it KCSO reserve program while sophoys at CWU. I planned on pursuing a law enforcement career, and thought any experience that I could would be helpful. The KCSO Booking Academy program worked well with my class work while I was still looking for my bachelor's degrees full time and held part-time grocery store work. I attended the Reserve Academy myself during my Junior year. There, I had my first encounters with decision-making skills, mindsets, officer safety tactics, emergency driving and legal issues that were the foundation of the real world for my career. The academy's small class environment, where full-time deputies were our coaches and brought practical and current knowledge to bear on our education, propelled me to the top of my game with the CWU LAJ curriculum, and the practical plan to what was previously the only conceptual knowledge. One memorable academy experience was the warning I received from detective (now senior vice-chancellor) Darren Higashiyama - who told me he could see that I was in danger of being a heavy badge, as my decisive nature along with young people could be a risky combination. He led me to learn de-escalation and negotiation techniques that have been valuable in my career. Thanks to him, I came to understand the benefits of talking through a conflict rather than resorting to more aggressive means. Some of my most memorable experiences as a booking deputy worked as a school resource officer, participating in the first vehicle and following my feet, and getting my feet wet with very basic research on patrol. My first call was one of my most memorable: complaints from a stolen vehicle led to a high-risk car stop. We quickly learned that the driver of the car had recently been seriously assaulted and was trying to escape a violent domestic abuse situation. I found and arrested the deputy I was riding and the female abuserman for rape of domestic violence. Today, I'm a detective in the Dallas Police Department's fugitive unit experiencing my 18 months at Kittitas County Sheriff's Reserves I prepared for the recruitment process at the big county agency I wanted to work on. I was far ahead of my peers as an recruiter at the Dallas Police Academy, and the DPD field training program was reminiscent of my experiences now while at KCSO. Since coming to the DPD in 2008, I've worked on patrol, the Crime Response Team - a uniformed, pro-active anti-crime team - as a field training officer, a class counselor at the Dallas Police Academy, and in my current position where I work to find and arrest violent criminals. My time with KCSO was invaluable in providing a broad foundation of experience and perspective on law enforcement, and many of my reserve academy classmates and I remain in touch to date. Kittitas County Sheriff's Reserve Program is a fantastic way to gain real-world experience, real-world perspective, and real-world knowledge in a dynamic, team-oriented environment where you will be introduced to the practical world Law enforcement in the 21st century and parts of yourself that you just thought you knew. As a KCSO reserve, you will learn if you have what it takes to protect all people, maintain peace, and protect the U.S. Constitution. The sheriff's office is accepting applications currently reserved for the Academy 2021, which will run from January to May. If you're interested in this challenging opportunity, don't wait -- the interview and background process are already underway.
